Key note: CAMP ERIN

Often times, children do not have an avenue to express their grief or to honor and remember the person they lost. Being a grieving child can be a lonely experience. Many times he or she is the only one in the class or on a team. Who has lost a family member?

At a time in a child's life when it is very important to fit in, grief can be an isolating experience.

Camp Erin allows grieving children to be together, build community and share feelings with one another. At camp, children learn that grief, though painful, is a normal healthy emotion to experience.

Camp Erin is an annual three day camp experience offered at no charge and facilitated by professional staff and trained volunteers of HospiceCare of Southeast Florida. The camp is for children from 6 to 17 years of age, who have experienced a death of a loved one. Camp will be held April 17-19, 2009.
